

The Daily Gazetteer.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 25. 1743.

Vienna, Jan. 12.

ER Majesty has been pleased to name the Burgrave of Prague President of the Commission of Enquiry, which is shortly to be opened there, and the Count de Collowrath is added to that Commission. As the March of the Auxiliary Troops will certainly oblige the French to recall Part of their Troops Bavaria, her Majesty is resolved to send a Reinforcement of 14,000 Men to Count Traun. According to the last Letters from Italy, that General was under apprehensions from the Spaniards; and it was not that the King of Sardinia, in case he found it necessary to recall any Part of his Troops, would leave under the immediate Command of that General. We have received with great Satisfaction the News of the Emperor's acceding to the Treaty of Breslau. The Peace of Birkenfeld is set out for the Hague.

Amsterdam, Jan. 23. We have just now received that 12 Battalions of French Foot are arrived at Antwerp; they are to be followed speedily by another Body of the like Force; and we are assured, that the Landarmies are also in Motion, in order to go into the Pretence is, to ease the Electorate of Bavaria, and we are told, that they are speedily to be reinforced by a Body of 30,000 Recruits. Such Tales do however gain Credit here, where we are full well acquainted with the French. His Imperial Majesty has Orders for encreasing the Militia in his Electorate of Saxony; and as the Elector Palatine has agreed to give up his Forces in the Imperial Service to the Emperor, henceforward to remain neuter, we flatter ourselves his Majesty may safely return to Munich; and that Means will be found to make him easy there.

Amsterdam, Jan. 15. The Chamberlain Rantzau was on the 11th from Jurland. We work here with ordinary Diligence, on a Squadron of 12 Ships of Line, viz. 3 of 70 Guns, 4 of 60, 5 of 50, besides 12 of 30 Guns each, 1 of 24, and 1 of 10. Our Forces have also Instructions to march on the first of March. Notwithstanding these Preparations, a Report is at Court, that the Prince Royal will shortly visit a Princess of Prussia, and that thereupon we shall alter our old Alliances with Great Britain and Prussia.

Amsterdam, Jan. 10. Yesterday a Courier passed thro' this Place, with a Ratification of the Treaty lately concluded between the Courts of Moscow and London. He was also charged with the Czarina's Instrument of Accession to the Treaty of Breslau. He informed us, that the Emperor's Majesty had been graciously pleased to receive Prince Anthony-Ulrick of Wolfenbuttle, and his wife the Princess Anne of Mecklenburgh, together with their Children and Family, from the Fortresses of Riga; within a few Hours after his Departure, there arrived a Purveyor belonging to that Princess's Household, in order to make the necessary Dispositions for her Reception in her Journey to Brunswick.

Amsterdam, Jan. 21. We are inform'd, that the Reason the French Troops did not march so soon as was expected, was the extraordinary Motions of Prince Lobkowitz and Count Kvenhuller. This Morning however 12 Battalions have begun their March. Here is a Report, that Deckendorff has been surprized; but neither the Time, nor Circumstances, are mentioned, do not give entire Credit to it. It is certain, that M. Belleisle's quitting Bohemia, instead of helping, ruined the French Affairs, by giving the Austrians Opportunity to pour their whole Forces upon them, and the Troops under that Marshal's Command, are for nothing but to fill the Hospitals, which were ordered before their Arrival. It is reported, that Count de Saxe, the Prussian Minister at the Court of Vienna, has refused to make some Proposals for preventing the Succession of his Imperial Majesty's Hereditary Countries; but it is also said, that he cannot act till the French Troops have actually evacuated Bavaria, since it would be unreasonable to attempt trying the Queen of Hungary's Army, while an Army of Foreigners are on the Frontiers of their Country. Some great Remittances have been made from France, both to the Imperial Court, and to the Armies, so that every Thing is now pretty nearly paid for.

Extract of a Private Letter.

Paris, Jan. 29, 1743. Orders have been sent to the War Office to stop the issuing of any more Commissions on the new Edict for raising 300 Troops of Horse and Dragoons; there had been already 116 Commissions issued, but for the remaining 184, they will not issue at all; a Method being thought of for effecting the Thing, without oppressing the People so much, or encreasing the Expence of broken Officers on the Government, in case a Peace should be concluded. In order to this, every Troop in the Service is to be augmented with five Men, and it is computed, that this will have the same Effect as raising so many new Troops. The Government of Charlemonte, which the King lately gave to the Chevalier de Saxe, is worth 12,000 Livres per Annum; and what still enhances the Favour, the Gift of it, at this Time, will be understood by all the World, as a Proof of his Majesty's Approbation both of his, and the Martial's Behaviour in Bohemia.

If any thing could soften the Approach of Death, his Eminency the Cardinal de Fleury must leave the World with much Satisfaction. On the 16th he was excessively ill, heard high Mass in his Chamber, and about 3 o'Clock the King did him the Honour of a Visit, accompanied by many of the first Nobility in the Kingdom. His Eminency desired to speak with him alone, upon which, all who were present withdrew, and the Conversation lasted somewhat more than an Hour. His Eminency had a very bad Night. On the 17th in the Morning, the Sieur Tartre and his Brother, who are Notaries at Paris, came to see his Will sign'd. On the 18th her Majesty paid him a Visit. In the Afternoon he sent for M. de Parc, and gave him Directions as to publick Affairs, and seem'd to be much better than for many Days past. On the 19th he fell suddenly into fainting Fits, and soon after complained of such an Inflammation in his Throat, as prevented him from taking either Nourishment, or Remedies. He continued in this distressed Condition the best part of that, and of the next Day, and then grew better. All the Princes of the Blood, the Chancellor, the Archbishop of Paris, the Ministers of State, and all the Foreign Ambassadors, have been to testify their Concern, and were extremely surprized to see with what Presence of Mind he received their Compliments. Some Days ago it was thought he would recover, but now it is judged to be impossible, and most People think he is already dead, the Truth of which will be known in a few Hours.

The King has granted the Prince de Tingry, Son to Marshal Montmorency, the Survivance of Lieutenant-General of Flanders, which Charge is at present exercised by his Father; the Court pretends to have certain Intelligence, that the Allies of the Queen of Hungary have form'd a Design of invading the Duchy of Lorraine in the Spring, which is the Reason that military Preparations are carried on there with such Warmth, that they continue to raise Men so vigorously in all Parts of the Kingdom. Some Folks are of Opinion, that after all the Bustle that has been made about the Fleet, there will be none put to Sea in the Spring. This, at least, is certain, that the Design which the Breft Squadron was to have executed, is laid aside for the present.

THE Elements of ALGEBRA, New and Easy Methods, with their Use and Application in the Solution of a great Variety of Arithmetical and Geometrical Questions, by General and Universal Rules.
To which is prefix'd, An Introduction containing a succinct History of this Science.

By Mr. NATHANIEL HAMMOND, of the Bank.

Extract from the Account of this Book in the Works of the Learned.

'The World has long complained of the Want of a good Introduction to Algebra. Some are so very careful, that they were contriv'd not to teach but to introduce a Treatise others again are larger, but wrote with so little Consideration to the Understandings of such as are altogether un-quainted with the Science, that they are of very little Use to those who are most inclin'd to make use of them. What it comes to pass, that few find it practicable to come on Progress in Algebra without a Master, tho' certainly the Science in itself is far from surpassing a clear Head, and a reasonable Understanding.

'The Design of this Treatise, which is of a reasonable and which contains nothing which is not full, and to the Purpose, is to assist such as are engag'd in teaching Algebra with a regular Method, and a large Stock of Examples, so that their Scholars may find Employment in their Studies and to enable such as live in Country-Places, and such as frequently want all other Tutors, except Books, to acquire such a Skill in this Science, as may enable them to teach Portion of their Time agreeably in the Cultivation of better Parts, and in rendering a natural Method of teaching after Truth habitual.

'The Treatise begins with a copious Explanation of the Fundamental Principles of the Art, and of the Algebraic Method of Notation used therein. The Author then proceeds to the several Rules, explaining them carefully and copiously in all their various Cases; so that with a moderate Attention it is simply impossible for a Person, who desires to be Master of Algebra, to miss of his End.

'We never find this Writer advancing any thing out of proper Place, or burthening the Mind of his Scholar with Rules, before they become necessary: He pushes to the imitated the judicious Euclid in this Respect; and he has done it with equal Art and Felicity. By this means he has delivered the young Student in Algebra from that which is usually the most fatiguing Part of the Science, viz. The Doctrine of Surds, in the Manner in which it is usually taught. By the same Means he leads his Reader directly to Equations; and, by shewing him the Profit he will reap from this Science, encourages him to overcome all his difficulties. But having thus laid a strong and rational Foundation, he moves more slowly through the rest of his Work, that whoever follows him, may be oblig'd to become Master of ever Branch of the Art, so as to be a complete Algebraist before he quits his Book, and not a Smatterer.

'Quadratic Equations, and the Art of managing Converging Series, the admirable Invention of the illustrious Newton, are here so clearly explained, and their several Cases so plainly set down, and so thoroughly explained, that they may be truly said, there are no where else such Instructions to be met with. At the Close of the Book, we find a succinct account of Observations, necessary for enlightening such as are willing to proceed still farther in analytic Discoveries, so that considering the Compacts of this Work, and that the is very moderate, it is as complete as possibly can be imaged: And he who is thoroughly versed in it, will find no great Difficulties, when he proceeds to sublimer Studies. The Language is plain and natural, the Book is more useful than any other in Examples, and the Illustrations of are so full and clear, that it is impossible to mistake the Meaning.
